

MANY STATES' ELECTIONS ON

General Report For The Country At Large Shows Local Questions Are At Issue.

ROOSEVELT VOTES AT OYSTER BAY

Took Four Minutes To Cast His Ballot--Much Interest In Cleveland's Decision As To The Mayor-ality Fight.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, D. C., Nov. 5.—Official Washington to all appearances was not greatly interested in the state elections today. Even the small amount of interest manifested in the off-day contests appeared to be lacking. The national capital, in common with the rest of the country, has been so absorbed in the financial situation of the past week or two that politics has been almost lost sight of for the time being. It is not believed that the panicky symptoms will effect the election results to any extent whatever, nor is it thought that the balloting today will afford any reliable indication as to which way the wind may blow in the national election of next year.

In other words, the contests that end at the polls today have been fought out on purely state issues. Of the six states that elect governors only half are in any doubt as to the result. Massachusetts is about as certain to elect its republican executive as Mississippi is to choose its democratic candidate, and the latter has no opposition. Rhode Island may go either way, though the chances seem to favor the democrats in the governorship, but in any event the result would not be regarded as of any political significance beyond the borders of the state itself. New Jersey is living up to her reputation of being a somewhat doubtful state, though the republican preference by a considerable majority. They are also putting forth confident claims as to Kentucky and Maryland. They have put up an unusually strong fight in those two states, but to the unprejudiced outsider, it appears that both states will remain in the democratic column for the present at least. The fusion fight of the republicans and the liberal followers against Tammany in New York city is really attracting more attention here than any of the state elections.

In New York.
New York, Nov. 5.—The quietest election in years so far as the general public interested is concerned is proceeding in greater New York today. Slow balloting in the early hours indicated light vote.

In Cleveland.
Cleveland, Nov. 5.—Intense interest in the mayoralty contest was manifested when the polls opened. A large number of voters were waiting to cast their ballots when the polls opened at 5:30.

All Quiet.
Washington, Nov. 5.—As far as received the returns from various state municipal, county elections which are in progress in the thirteen states indicated the interest in local rather than national questions.

The general situation is such as to justify a conclusion the issues for national campaign are yet to be formulated.

Fair weather prevails in all sections except in parts of the lake region of New York, New England, where there are areas of clouds and local storms. The temperatures everywhere are moderate.

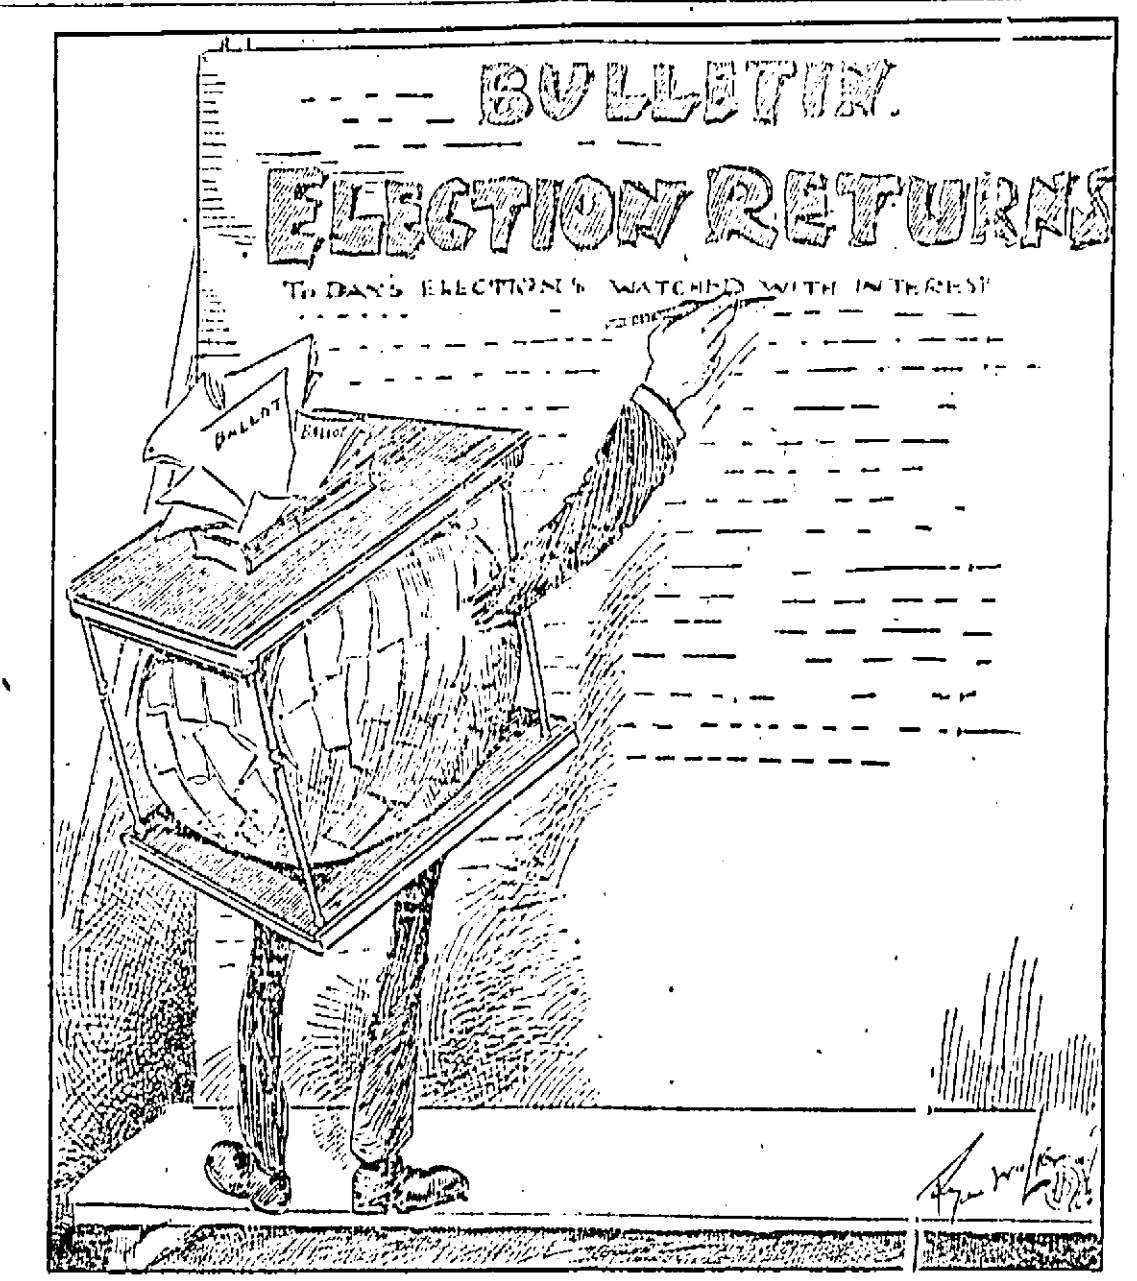

Many Arrests.
New York, Nov. 5.—Over a hundred precautionary arrests for illegal voting were made but all the prisoners were released because of lack of evidence.

Light in Pennsy.
Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 5.—Throughout the state the voting for state treasurer is rather light.

Nebraska Heavy.
Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 5.—The reports received indicate a very heavy vote.

In Baltimore.
Baltimore, Md., Nov. 5.—The early balloting indicated a large vote.

President Votes.
Oyster Bay, N. Y., Nov. 5.—President Roosevelt arrived at Oyster Bay at ten o'clock this morning. He was met by Mrs. J. West Roosevelt and drove in her carriage to the polling place. He there was given ballot number 84 and spent four minutes in preparing it. On leaving the polling place the President went for a drive about the village, leaving for Washington at eleven o'clock.

ELECTION DAY.

CHRISTMAS TOYS COMING OVER FAST

Things That Will Satisfy Desires of Children Christmas Time Arrive From Abroad.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
New York, Nov. 5.—Several of the steamships that have arrived here from Europe during the past few days have been veritable Santa Claus ships. Their great holds have been filled with thousands of cases of toys sent over by the German and French manufacturers for the Christmas in America. Included in the cargoes have been whole crates full of mechanical toys, automobiles, engines, sailing, model toys and trunks, to say nothing of dolls sufficient in number, variety and attractiveness to satisfy the desires of thousands of little girls, and whole regiments of lead soldiers for the little boys. A large part of these toys are for the Western trade. A month hence they will cover the counters of the great stores throughout the middle west and Canada.

DISCOVER DRUG IN DEAD MAN'S BODY

Post Mortem Examination Discloses Strange State of Affairs—Goes to Jail.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Beloit, Wis., Nov. 5.—L. H. Perkins of Lawrenceville, Kansas, who died after falling from his roof last summer from a morphine habit prior to the accident, such evidence was produced from a post mortem examination of the stomach, made at the request of insurance companies, Mr. Perkins having held policies amounting to $300,000. Perkins graduated from Beloit college in 1877 and has given employment to the school.

Goes to Jail.
By the testimony of his wife and daughter, Lansing White has been sentenced to spend ninety days in the county jail at Janesville for using abusive language in his home. White refused to take the stand in his own behalf, saying he remembered nothing of the occurrence and admitting that he must have been drunk.

OBEY THE LAWS OR LOSE THE LICENSE

Saloon Men of Manitowish Must Do Good or They Will Be Arrested.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Manitowish, Wis., Nov. 5.—Saloon men of this city must be good or they will lose their licenses. The council at their meeting last night passed an order that saloon men who sell liquor to minors and supplied drunkards who have been posted will lose their licenses. The Turner Opera House company, which conducts bars in connection with their public dance halls, were scored and the police department were directed to keep a close watch of these places in particular. An attempt will be made to close several places said to be operating without licenses.

DENIES ANY SALE OF THE FREE PRESS

Senator Stephenson Says That He Has Not Given Up His Interests in Milwaukee Paper.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 5.—A report circulating in Milwaukee reached Senator Stephen Stephenson this morning to the effect that Senator Isaac Stephenson had disposed of his interest in the Free Press to W. D. Connor. Mr. Stephenson was seen this morning by a representative of the Associated Press and emphatically denied the report. He said that there had been no negotiations looking toward the sale of his interest in the paper. He added further that he expected to retain his interests in the Free Press in the future just as he had in the past.

The Report.
Milwaukee, Nov. 5.—That Lieutenant Governor W. D. Connor has purchased the controlling interest in the Milwaukee Free Press from Senator Isaac Stephenson is the report that has been whispered in newspaper and political circles here today. In case the report be true and Mr. Connor comes into possession of the controlling interest of the Free Press both H. P. Myrick, managing editor, and J. J. Harvey, business manager, of the paper will retire, it is said.

HEAVILY FINED WHEN HIS CASE IS CALLED

Ex-Supervisor of Milwaukee County Given Two Hundred Dollar Penalty.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 5.—By entering a plea of nolo contendere this morning Peter J. Mead, ex-supervisor of North Milwaukee, admitted the truth of the four indictments rendered against him by a grand jury and threw himself upon the mercy of the court. Judge Brazee fined him two hundred dollars and costs.

NEWSPAPER MAN IS PUT UNDER ARREST

Former Milwaukee Man Placed under Arrest on Charge of Criminal Libel.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Manitowish, Wis., Nov. 5.—C. M. Wright, a Milwaukee newspaperman who has been editing the Daily Tribune of this city, is under arrest on the charge of criminal libel. The complaint has been made by Wm. Rabe, Sr., president of the Manitowish Mailing company and superintendent of the County Industrial association. Wright is alleged to have libeled Mr. Rabe in the publication of certain articles reflecting suspicion in his management of the county fair. Hearing is set for November 27th, and Mr. Wright was released on bonds.

PASSENGERS CANNOT BE KICKED OFF CARS

Supreme Court Ruled Passengers Cannot Be Ejected From Street-Cars.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Nov. 5.—A street car company has no right to kick a passenger off from a car when the substance of a decision handed down by the state supreme court here this afternoon, the decision having been written by Chief Justice Cassady. The case arose upon a complaint made by Hugh Schmitt, who was ejected from a car, of La Crosse, against the La Crosse City Railway company from whom the plaintiff had received a lower court opinion that he was entitled to $2,265.66 damages. The Supreme Court by its decision sustains the lower court and affirms the decision that the plaintiff is entitled to $2,265.66 damages.

Arrested For Fighting.
Roy and Mest Simmons, members of a trio which engaged in a free-for-all fight on North Main street this afternoon, were arrested and are detained at the lockup.

SAYS FINE HAS CAUSED MUCH UNEASINESS ABOUT AMERICAN SECURITIES

This Is The Opinion Of A Financier Who Has Just Returned From Europe.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
New York, Nov. 5.—George Jay Gould, returning today from a six months' automobile tour of Europe discussed freely the European view of the recent financial crisis in this country. He said: "Our credits are in bad way abroad and people in Europe received an awful scare and they are still nervous and afraid of our securities. But their view is all wrong. Our country is all right. We have simply got to get together and put our shoulders to the wheel to restore confidence." When asked his opinion as to the cause of uneasiness in Europe he said: "I believe without hesitation the terrible sentence imposed upon the Standard Oil company is the largest factor to the people in Europe. The fine looks like confiscation to them."

MUCH INTERESTED EFFORT TO DEPOSE GOMPERS MAY FAIL

Many Members of the County Board Are Reading the Statutes These Days.

With the near approach of the November session of the county board members of that august body are anxiously searching through the statutes and new laws for interpretation of the new law which brings into existence the office of highway commissioner, which office is to be filled for the first time at the coming session. Opinion seems to differ and the law recently passed by the legislature is considered faulty by many who have studied it despite the interpretation of the attorney general on the subject. The law in question is known as a provision for a system of permanent highways under county supervision. It is chapter 487, laws of 1907, and provides for the election of a highway commissioner. It was published July 10. Two days later a second law known as chapter 552 was passed which in a way modifies the former law, was passed. It is on these two laws that the trouble hinges. The attorney general explains the second law as amending the first, which was published yesterday are of the opinion the matter is a serious matter. The attorney general's opinion relative to the second law in relation to the first is as follows:

Section 1311-1, page 285. This provides an optional town tax of not less than one-half mill nor more than two and one-half mills. It is modified by section 1311-1, page 295, which provides a lower limit of one-fourth mill instead of one-half mill.

Section 1311-2. Under this section the county highway commissioner must approve the plans and grades of the road to be improved, but according to section 1311-1, page 295, he must make the survey, establish grades, and furnish specifications and estimates of the cost of any improvement.

Section 1311-5. The provision of this section that the highway commissioner shall be a "competent person," is modified by the statement in section 1311-1, page 292, that he must be a competent engineer or experienced road builder; and by section 1311-2, page 295, which provides that he shall hold no other town or county office.

Section 1311-8. The compensation of the highway commissioner, as provided in this section, is changed by section 1311-3, page 293. According to this he must be paid a per diem of not less than four ($4.00) dollars per day for time actually spent, in counties of less than ten million dollars assessed valuation, and an annual salary of not less than $1000, in counties having a greater valuation.

Section 1311-11. This section deals with the distribution of maps of the proposed county system of highways. It is modified by section 1311-2, page 291, which provides also that one copy shall be filed with the State Geological Survey.

Section 1311-12. This section provides for the levy of a county tax of "not over three-quarters of a mill" which is to be kept in the "highway reserve fund." Section 1311-1, page 292, changes this to "not less than one-fourth of a mill nor more than two mills" to be used for the maintenance of the "county road and bridge fund."

Section 1311-15. This section provides a limit of $2000 for the expenditure of county moneys in any town, and states that in case the maximum county tax is not large enough to grant all requests for aid the towns shall share in proportion to the amount asked. Section 1311-1, page 295, modifies this by providing that should more than one town apply "the county board shall determine how many of those first applying shall receive aid."

Section 1311-16 and 1311-17. The provisions of these sections that the highway commissioner and the chairmen of the town in which work is to be done shall have supervision of the work and power to let contracts jointly, are modified by section 1311-1, page 293, which provides that the county board shall have exclusive control of the expenditure of the road and bridge fund; and also modified by section 1311-5, page 293 which provides that the highway commissioner shall have personal charge of any work done by the county.

Section 1311-13. This provision for an annual report is amplified by section 1311-3, page 295, which provides that the board shall "publish annually and circulate a report of the work done by them."

Section 1311-1, page 297, provides that chapter 558 "shall not apply to counties having a population of one hundred and fifty thousand or more."

PROGRESS IN CHINA

The American board of commissioners for foreign missions is sending out some interesting facts concerning conditions now prevailing in China.

Advancement along the lines of civilization is marked and very encouraging. Of the system of government the report says:

"In nothing has China turned such a complete somersault as in her system of government examinations. Under the old regime the young men who applied for government positions had to pass examinations on the teachings of Confucius, as the prime qualifications for office.

"This was as absurd as it would be to expect that American youth should be proficient in Sanskrit as the first requisite for the post of electrical engineers. (Now questions like these are being put to the students: 'What is the bearing of the Siberian railway on China? What is the bearing of the Treaty of Berlin and of the Monroe doctrine on the far east? How do foreigners regulate the press, the post-office, commerce, railways, banks, taxation, and how do they get faithful men? What is Herbert Spencer's philosophy of sociology? Explain free trade and protection. What nation has the best system of stamp duty?'

"It would be something of a stunt for their competitors in American universities to give intelligent and comprehensive answers to these questions. In order to keep pace with this intellectual awakening an imperial decree has gone forth that every province in China must have its university, every prefecture its high school and every village its primary school.

"About 250,000 teachers are required at once to meet the sudden demand for western knowledge. 'It is the highest possible compliment to the missionaries that their schools and colleges are acknowledged to be the best and serve as models for the new educational scheme which is now fully launched. The government offers very large salaries to the Christians from these schools to be its teachers."

"This is practical Christianity and it is gratifying to know that under its influence China is making rapid strides towards civilization. The yellow races will be slow to abandon religious creeds which date back many centuries, but Christianity is accomplishing a mission when these races are taught a better way to live. Energy is now being exerted in this direction, and good results are already apparent.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION

No particular change has occurred in the financial situation and people are adjusting themselves to new conditions with good grace. The fact is generally recognized that the currency stringency extends to all parts of the country, and businessmen everywhere are co-operating with the banks to relieve the situation.

"Time will be required to restore normal conditions and patience will be in demand in liberal degree. The New York banks have furnished the western and southern states $200,000,000 in currency, during the past 60 days, to aid in handling the crops and money is needed for the same legitimate purpose.

"This large block of money, scattered over 20 states or more, is distributed among the farmers, and usually finds its way back to the channels of trade by the first of January.

About the same amount of money is required every year to handle the crops, and New York banks are dependent upon the currency. As a result there is always a time between Sept. 1st and Nov. 1st when money is in active demand and when eastern banks are drained for currency.

In ordinary times they are able to meet the strain without embarrassment but this year money is in such active demand, in all channels of business, that the supply was not equal, and there was no way to increase it on short notice.

This does not mean that the banks are weak, for they were never stronger than today, but it does mean that the nation has outgrown its banking system.

Lacking an emergency currency, authorized by the government, the banks are obliged to resort to a medium of their own, known as cashier's checks.

This money is just as good as any other money, and people accept it without question, but the banks are entitled to better treatment by the government, and the next congress will realize the importance of placing the banking system on a basis where emergency of this kind can be met without humiliating the banks of the country. Henry Clews has this to say regarding elastic currency:

"Recent experience emphasizes the necessity for establishing an elastic currency system. For several years we have been adding freely to our currency supplies to meet the growing requirements of trade. When business contracts we shall find ourselves with an overabundance of currency and no means of regulation.

"We need an automatic elastic currency system through banks of issue, corresponding to the Canadian system, which for many years has worked so smoothly and safely under conditions similar to those in the United States. No means has yet been found for preventing panics, but a scientific currency system would go far towards avoiding such crises and mitigating their effect. Congress could not do vote its time to a better purpose this winter than to reform in our present antiquated and clumsy currency methods."

The state press do not appear to care a rap who will get the Wisconsin delegation at the 1908 republican national convention. However they usually wake up when the time comes and make it hot enough to make up any lost time. As it now is Taft has the call of many and unless some other man shows national strength enough to beat him it is safe to say the majority will be shouting for him when the right time appears.

The man who puts his money in a safety vault, or hides it away in a stock, at a time like the present, retreats from civilization a medium which everybody needs, and does more to add to the stringency than any other class of men. Keep the dollar in circulation. The banks are sound and prosperity will continue if everybody lends a hand.

The anti-athletic members of the University faculty will sit up and take notice that Wisconsin has lost one football game this season and won one by a margin of one point. No victory just a scratch. It is to either quit playing entirely or get down to business.

The value of the state agricultural department of the University is demonstrated more each year. The young men from the farms appreciate the course of study given them and profit by the lessons taught.

The money stringency in New York has excluded the tales from the fighting in Africa for a while and it is a good thing. As soon as the present troubles are over at home the War Cloud in the Balkans will come.

In Cleveland today one of the bitter political fights that used to occur in Wisconsin, is taking place and the prospects are that before the vote is counted someone is going to be in trouble.

Confidence betrays confidence. If the public becomes satisfied in a man's or an institution's integrity nothing can be said that will be believed against him. Public men should take the people into their confidence.

Spain's little King and Queen appear to have strenuous times when they travel just the same as other people do, despite their royal prerogatives.

There is nothing that succeeds like success. This is a maxim that is so old and true no one can say they never have heard it. Roosevelt is successful and succeeds.

American gold goes to England in the shape of dollars. Why not create an American nobility to keep this money at home?

The Northwestern is crying for money to move their crops. A little while ago the cry was there were no crops to move.

There is no more muck to rake and little left to be reformed. What a relief it must be to a lot of people.

The men with money have gone up a peg in the scale, and on investigation are not so bad as published.

A little time for sober thought will do the people good. The pace has been too fast for safety.

France is still having in its midst descendants of royalty and of the Napoleonic empire and no trouble.

Today is election day but not even a rifle occurs in Wisconsin.

Eleven Nov. 5.—Butter—On the board of trade today butter was quoted at 21¢ firm; 5¢ decline from last week. Output for the week, High district, 689,100 lbs.

One of the most remarkable features of the local market this week was the drop of creamery butter from twenty-seven and a half to twenty-four and a half cents per pound. This makes the butter prices the country over and their drop of three cents from last week's quotations is immediately followed by the local merchants.

Last week the price dropped two cents, making with the past four weeks a drop of five cents, which is remarkable for this time of year. Local merchants also announce a drop in the price of some of the packing-house prices bacon in several cases going down two cents a pound. Corn is still about the same. Rye takes a slight rise, but barley is down now and those who sold early in the season have a good profit. Many received eight-cents and higher for their crop and made a good thing by it. Oats are also slightly after several weeks of high prices.

FITS LIKE A GLOVE

La France SHOE FOR WOMEN

Many shoes appear beautiful—in a store window. But the shoe you want is the one that keeps its good looks—the La France. Permanent beauty requires far more than high-grade materials or even thorough workmanship. To these rare shoe-qualities must be added the skill and accurate knowledge of the designer who is able to perfectly fit coming footwear styles to the lines of a woman's foot. The popularity of the La France is partly due to its unvarying glove-like fit—the true basis for enduring shoe-attractiveness. What, then, would be more becoming on your feet than the La France—the quality shoe of lasting beauty that wears as well as it looks.

Every woman much on her feet should investigate the most recent invention in shoe making—the La France. Its unexcelled comfort is added to its perfect fit, its style, beauty and durability of every La France.

CHAPTER IX.

IT was Sunday evening, "beauty night" in the social circle of the Morningstars, and Ollie, dressed in her best fur-trimmed coat, was seated in the front room, which was never opened except on the Sabbath. Ollie was awaiting the arrival of her "fellow-lower." She was looking very complacent as she rocked herself in the big, stuffed rocking chair. She had been slower than most of the girls in the neighborhood in attracting a suitor, and now that a young man of means who owned his own farm clear had begun to wait upon her with significant regularity every Sunday night she was feeling encouraged.

Eunice was seated near her at one of the windows, an open Bible on her lap.

She was not like Ollie, dressed in her Sunday clothes. The truth was Eunice did not have any Sunday clothes. But the fresh gingham kitchen gown of dark blue which she wore, with a bit of cheap lace around her neck, threw out the fairness of her face and hair and did for her what all Ollie's dress could not do for that young woman's fat, round visage.

A few feet away, in the open doorway leading out to the porch, Dr. Kinross sat smoking a pipe and reading a Sunday paper. Unlike Mr. Morningstar and Abe, he did not celebrate the day of rest by sitting about in a toilet consisting of Sunday pants, a white shirt without a collar and no vest or cap. He wore his overalls as usual.

His reading of his newspaper was varied with speculations as to why Eunice so industriously read the Bible. Was she devout? He had always believed that she had a constitutional dislike of devout people—unless they were Roman Catholics, in which case they were rather picturesque. But evangelized devoutness, even in the illiterate, from whom one expected no better, was generally unimpressive. Or was it the girl's mental hunger which led her to read the only book permitted on the Sabbath to any one over whom Mr. Morningstar had any authority?

Ollie Morningstar was regarding with pride the furnishings of the best front room. Her parlor boasted of some elegance that no other parlor in the township possessed, for besides the inevitable plaster of Paris cut and crazy jug (the latter consisting of a large sized bottle covered with putty and stuccoed with various objects such as buttons, beads, pieces of glass, and so forth, and the whole gilded over to produce a wonderful effect) there was the large, elegant colored picture—Swift & Co.'s advertisement of hard-porcelain two great, fat, oval vases leaning drowsily against a fence, with a lurid sunset in the background. Ollie thought it lovely, though of course not so beautiful as "Boet of Ages" framed in red plush and gilt, representing a young lady in a nightgown hanging to a cross, the angry billows dashing against the rocks on which she kneels and her long and remarkably abundant hair flowing in ripples far down her back. These things were among the possessions of Ollie's world.

Presently her complacent expectation and the reading of Kinross and Eunice were interrupted by Georgiana and Daisy, who strolled into the parlor and seated themselves. Daisy on the front doorstep near Peter and Georgiana on the window sill beside Eunice. Georgiana carried over her arm the skirt and waist of a pretty white gown. She and Daisy, having both come and reasoned that the girl Eunice must feel her shabbiness in contrast with Ollie's gorgeousness, had decided to offer her a few of their own garments, beginning with this white dress of Georgiana's.

"It may serve to develop the girl's latent aesthetic sense to give her some pretty clothes," Georgiana had suggested. "Tasteful clothing is often really educative."

"Yes," Daisy had gravely agreed, "and I can imagine that Eunice might look awfully fetching if she sported up. But," she added rather frostily, "I suppose she feels there isn't any inducement to sport up out here—with not a man about the place that isn't as woody as a tree, Georgiana—but that Eunice is too nice looking to care for Abe. Have you noticed how stuck on her he is? She'd be an awful good to throw herself away—d-d nice looking as she is—on a fellow as tight across the chest as he is—on any one else see he is! Ugh!" Daisy shook her shoulders with a shudder. "If I had to marry a man, with a nature like that—close and mean, you know—I'd get up some night and gently lay a wet towel over his nose and mouth. Then, you know, he'd be dead next morning. To be sure," she went on, "there's Peter—he might sport up for him—but he's such an indifferent thing! Give him his meals and that's all he wants. He doesn't look at girls. Not even at me—after I stooped to condescend to jolly him a little!"

"You entirely miss my point, Daisy, dear," Georgiana had returned gravely. "My object in offering Eunice a pretty gown is to try to awaken in her a sense of the beautiful on a much higher plane than that you talk about."

Seated on the window sill beside the object of her benevolent intentions, Georgiana led up tactfully to the matter of her gift.

"Eunice," she began earnestly, her eyes on the distant horizon which was just beginning to deepen its evening hues, "do you ever feel, in your nervousness to nature here, how really we ourselves are a part of all this wonderful beauty? It seems to me that this environment," she added, without waiting for Eunice to reply, "ought to make us sensitive to beauty in every detail of life."

Kinross grunted behind his newspaper and settled himself to enjoy the conversation. He was finding Georgiana very diverting.

Eunice looked up from her book, her dark eyes dreamy and absent.

"Sensitive to beauty even to the point of feeling out of harmony with our environment if we are not tastefully dressed," Georgiana went on. "And so," she ended gracefully, laying the gown she held across Eunice's lap, "I want to give you this pretty white gown."

Eunice's eyes grew wide with a questioning surprise. "You want to give it to me?" she asked wonderingly. "But why?"

Kinross, from behind his newspaper, found himself listening intently to hear what Eunice would say.

"Because I feel," Georgiana smiled encouragingly, "that even so trifling a thing as our clothes can help us to get into right relations with life."

The girl's puzzled gaze seemed trying to make it out. But before she could reply Ollie leaned forward and, eagerly examining the embroidery and ruffles on the pretty dress lying across Eunice's lap, asked with undisguised covetousness, "Did you wear it far once or just far so?"

"Oh, I wore it for 'nice,'" Georgiana smiled.

"Eunice she never did think at the close much like what I do," Ollie added indignantly.

"That is perhaps commendable to a certain point," said Georgiana gently. "But one should give just enough attention to outward adornment to let it express something of the inner life. The refinement of our thoughts and feelings or the lack of it is often symbolized by our dress. We should cultivate our natural inclinations for external harmonies—it is not right to be indifferent to them—they are a legitimate part of life."

She had addressed herself to Eunice, and the girl, still looking puzzled, answered uncertainly. "But when the lack of harmony with one's environment is fundamental more external adjustment can't help things."

Georgiana looked nonplussed. Daisy, fumbling the pages of a book she was not reading, dropped her lower lip in astonishment. Dr. Kinross put down his paper from before his face and took his pipe from his mouth. Even Ollie's face expressed surprise.

"We need not over let our environment rule us," said Georgiana, looking as though she had lost her bearings, but making an effort to recover herself.

"I am the master of my fate, I am the captain of my soul."

"And the great English poet Robert Browning," she continued instructively, "called environment 'machinery,' just meant to give life its fullness. Emerson's whole gospel is man's spiritual mastery of circumstance. I am aware that most of us are slaves to it. But we can rise to a plane where instead of letting it control us we control it. Otherwise we go through life mistaking the true beauty, the perfect harmony of the universe. I feel sure that you can find that harmony if you will keep your mind open to it. For instance," she said, with a perfunctory playfulness, "begin by putting on this white gown—in which I feel you will give those about you a genuine aesthetic pleasure—and even help to educate them to a taste in the small things of life."

"I suppose you mean to do me a kindness," Eunice answered, her eyes downcast, "and so I thank you. But it would humiliate me to be a recipient of charity. I find more of the 'harmony' which you seem to value so highly in clothing myself only in these clothes which I myself have earned rather than in—other people's things, however beautiful they may be."

She gathered up the white gown as she spoke and laid it on Georgiana's lap.

Kinross saw that Georgiana in her eagerness at the girl's failure to appreciate her generous patronage almost lost sight of the astonishing language she had used.

"If that is the way you feel," she answered, "very well. I beg your pardon if I have offended. I did not mean to. The fact is I have misunderstood. I did not know that"—She broke off incoherently, unable to express herself in her new and confused impression of the farm girl.

"Stung again!" exclaimed Daisy. "Please, Daisy!" protested Georgiana.

"But, indeed, Georgiana," pleaded Daisy, "I can't blame Eunice for thinking it isn't worth while to wear glad rags out here when no one would see her anyway."

"That isn't the point at all," returned Georgiana, looking distressed.

"Are you giving it back?" Ollie here demanded of Eunice incredulously. "Och, what makes you act so dumb? Stebbie," she said, turning to Georgiana, "it would do me—if you don't want it."

"You are too stout and too short for it," Georgiana answered a little distantly. "It isn't that I want to get rid of the gown. I thought merely to encourage Eunice."

"Encourage me?" repeated Eunice, again puzzled.

"But I see that I was mistaken," she said lastly.

She half turned her back with a movement that closed the conversation. Eunice's eyes fell to her book again, and for a time no one spoke, though Ollie's look of disgust at the loss of the proffered gown was louder than words.

Kinross replaced his pipe in his mouth and drew on it vigorously. This girl, Eunice—the sort of language she used, the ideas she expressed—talking about the want of harmony with her environment being "fundamental!"

"For an unschooled Pennsylvania Dutch girl of the backwoods"—but his reflection was checked by a whispered remark from Daisy at his side.

"Imagine that yard of pump water, Ollie, in one of Georgiana's gowns! She looks as though she weighed 250 pounds!"

"Do you mean avoirdupois?"

"Now, Pete, you needn't be so smart," she retorted resentfully. "What if I do mean avoirdupois? Oh, dear," she sighed, "I never seem to be cocksure of a fact. I almost wish I were clever instead of pretty."

"Now, if you was Georgie," he remarked, "you'd be both; ain't it?"

"Peter," Daisy gently reproved him. "I wouldn't be shocked if you called me Daisy. (Sweet name, isn't it?) But to permit yourself the liberty of calling Miss Ellery 'Georgie'—that's the limit! So you think," she added, "that she's both clever and beautiful?"

She thinks you, Peter," she confided to him, "have a latent fitness concealed somewhere about you?"

"A whatover?"

Daisy's answer was arrested by Georgiana's rising from the window sill and sitting down beside her on the front door step. Georgiana had evidently quite recovered her not easily disturbed equanimity.

BORT, BAILEY & COMPANY

The Last Great Coat Sale of the Season
For One Day Only, Friday, Nov. 8th

we will have to show you an immense line of

LADIES' AND MISSES' WINTER COATS

On this day we shall have with us the representative of F. Siegel & Bros., a firm noted for the style and excellent workmanship of their coats. Siegel writes us that their agent will bring with him more than four hundred exclusive styles in coats, including only the very latest models, each an extraordinary value at the price. These, together with our own immense line—more than four times greater than ever before—we will have to show you a great collection of exclusive models.

It will be the most comprehensive showing of fine Tailored Coats that we have ever offered ❁ ❁ ❁

You all know the famous "Siegel" Coats for women. They can be picked out in any group as having the best style. They look like coats costing twice the price.

The tailoring is of the highest type and the materials possess up to-dateness, beauty and serviceability.

The designers of Siegel Coats are constantly in touch with Paris and other leading style centers. Therefore a "Siegel" coat is always good style for a second season.

The showing we have prepared for Friday cannot fail to interest every woman who is contemplating the purchase of a new coat ❁ ❁ ❁

Coats for Ladies and Misses

A great collection of Ladies' Coats, 50 to 54 inches long—form-fitting, semi-fitting and loose fitting—made up in the fashionable tones of the staple solid colors, including Brown, Blue, Black, Tan and Red, and the charming color combinations in stripes, checks and novelty mixtures. The price starts at $10 for an all wool, full lined garment.

Special values at $12, $15,
 $18, $20, $25, $30, $35, $40

Fur Fabric Coats in Ponyskin, Persian Lamb and Caracul Effects have been so perfected that they will largely take the place of the real fur coat. Prices, $12 to $35.

In offering the ladies of Janesville and vicinity this great line of Cloaks our idea is to show them a much larger line of exclusive and fine garments than they could see in any other way. Selling many of these garments as we do, without the carrying risk, we can afford to sell them on a very close margin. You will save on every garment you may buy during this sale.

You are cordially invited to attend this great sale. You will be welcome whether you wish to purchase or not. ❁ ❁ ❁ ❁ ❁ ❁

Remember the Date,
 FRIDAY, NOVEMBER THE 8th
